

AUSTRALIAN WOOL CLIP FAILS

To Export Reduced Amount to U. S. If Drouth Persists.

Reduction in the exportation of wool from Australia to the manufacturers in the United States is likely to be the result of a 20 per cent decrease in Australia's wool clip which is predicted for 1920-21. A report just received by E. A. Logan, agricultural statistician, says that a careful survey just completed in Australia shows that unless the drouth is soon broken by heavy rains the season of 1920-21 will be disastrous to the sheep industry of Australia, which is one of the largest wool-producing countries in the world. The clip for 1919-20 was about 2,000,000 bales but the most favorable estimate for 1920-21 is 1,600,000 bales.
